

In today's business world, working virtually has become a fact of life. That means conference calls are universally required — and almost as universally disliked.

Is there hope for the conference call? The answer can be yes — if they are produced and performed with creativity, flexibility, and care by all of those involved.

Improv^e Your Conference Calls!

Performance of a Lifetime has developed an innovative training program, conducted on live conference calls, that helps you do just that. Whether you lead conference calls, or simply participate in them, we'll teach you the improvisational performance skills you need to make you and your conference calls more effective — more interactive, engaging, organized and productive.

In three small-group sessions, you will...

- Improve your listening skills
- Learn to build connections with everyone on a call
- Enhance your ability as a virtual presenter
- Discover the secret to being heard in the crowd
- Experience the technical best practices that can transform the conference call medium
